Passage 1

Read the following passage.

The smell of popcorn was in the air. I could hear kids laughing and screaming. People were everywhere! The breeze felt warm on my skin. It was a perfect day at the amusement park. My family and I wandered around the park, getting snacks and going on rides. I loved almost all types of rides! I loved to go fast and to spin around, to go down hills and to get splashed. The only rides I didn't like were rides that turn you upside-down. My little brother, Ben, didn't like those either, but my older sister, Laura, loved them.

When we finally were near a ride that went upside-down, she started asking me to go with her. I told her I don't like those rides, but she kept asking. Then she started whining because she didn't want to go alone. I was feeling sympathy for her, so I started thinking that maybe I should go with her, even though I really don't like to go upside-down. I looked to my parents for help.

"Matt, you are allowed to stand up for yourself. If something makes you feel really uncomfortable, you can tell people 'no.' It's OK to tell Laura that you love her, but that you can't go with her because going upside-down makes you uncomfortable. Be strong but kind when you tell her, so that she knows you're serious," Mom said. "I don't want to make Laura mad or sad, though," I replied to Mom, "and I don't want her to think I'm being mean." "There's a difference between being aggressive and being assertive. You're not saying 'no' to be mean to Laura or to hurt her feelings. You're just listening to your own feelings to make sure you stay safe. It's fine to tell her no for this," Mom answered. "The same goes for Laura. If you ask her to arm wrestle and she doesn't feel comfortable, she's allowed to say 'no' too. We are all allowed to stand up for ourselves to make sure we stay safe. Does that make sense?" "Yes, thanks Mom," I said.

I told Laura that I love her and like to do things with her, but that I wasn't comfortable going on upside-down rides today because they scare me. She was sad, but went on the ride by herself and was really happy when it was over. We had a great rest of the day at the amusement park!

Summary:

Passage 2

Read the following passage.

The resources of any one environment are limited. Depending on which plants and animals share the environment, there may not be enough of everything to go around. All organisms need water, food and shelter to stay alive. These resources are beneficial, which means they are good for the organisms. When an environment is low on any of these things, organisms must compete for them. Those who get to the resources first have the best chance of survival. Being without water, food or shelter for very long is detrimental, which means it is harmful to organisms.

The resources in an area determine how big the plant and animal populations can be. Sometimes there are too many living things in an area. The weakest of the populations will not be able to get the resources they need. As the weak die out, the populations get smaller. Finally, the area's resources recover and can support them again.

Sometimes people will capture members of large animal populations and move them. They take them to another location with less competition. This helps them, the animals, survive. Sometimes the government will allow hunting of large animal populations. Deer and rabbits can be a good food source for people. When there are too many of these animals in an area, they sometimes come into the cities looking for food. They often cause trouble. Hunting keeps the number of animals under control.
